

How TourneyHQ works

From registration to recognition.

A high-level map of the product: who uses it, how a tournament moves from setup to prize-giving, and what happens on the course in between. It describes what is built today. A step-by-step user guide comes later and builds on this.

WHO USES IT

Four kinds of people, three ways in

Organizers run things from the console. Players use the player app on their phone. Anyone with a club's link can watch the public board without signing in.

Console

Organizer

- The club secretary, society or league organizer
- Sets up tournaments, the field, rounds and money
- Publishes the draw, enters or approves cards, closes the event

Console

Staff

- Assistants added by the organizer
- Help run the day: the field, the draw, entering cards
- Each one takes a staff seat on the club's plan

Player app

Player

- Signs up for events, sees their tee time and group
- Scores their card on the phone, even with no signal
- Follows the board, their money and the club calendar

Public board

Spectator

- Opens a shared link, such as a clubhouse screen or a group chat
- No login. Names and scores only.
- Nothing appears until the organizer publishes

From a name to the honours board

A tournament needs only a name to exist. Everything else is added as it becomes known, and stays editable through the event.

Multi-round events loop back from results to the next draw. A stroke-play cut is applied automatically when the round it depends on is marked finished, keeping the top N and ties.

1

Create

From scratch, from a template, or by copying last year's event. Settings carry over and scores never do.

2

Rounds

Each round has its own format, course, tees, 9 or 18 holes and scoring basis (gross, net, Stableford). Rounds can be played away at another course.

3

Field

Players sign up themselves, are invited, or are imported from a list. A capacity cap and a waiting list apply, and entries can need approval.

4

Flights and draw

Flights group players by handicap. The tee sheet builds four-balls and keeps pairing requests together. Publishing it sends each player their tee time.

5

Play and results

Cards come in from phones or from staff. Leaderboards, match standings, cuts and knockout brackets update as they do.

6

Close

Money is settled as a record, prizes are awarded, and marking the event complete closes its rounds.

A ROUND ON THE DAY

What happens between the first tee and the last putt

The same card feeds every screen, so the organizer's leaderboard, the player's board and the public board all read from one source.

Three ways to score

- Each player scores their own card, hole by hole between shots
- Or the whole card at once, to check against the paper one
- Staff enter paper cards in the console

No account needed

- With round codes on, a player types an eight-character code to reach their card
- The code leaves out letters that look alike, such as O and 0

Built for the course

- Voice entry: say "par" or "bogey"
- Text sized for sunlight, at 7:1 contrast on every screen
- Installs from the browser, with no app store needed

SCORING AND HANDICAPS

From a handicap index to a stroke on the 7th

Handicaps follow the World Handicap System, and every figure is worked out from the course the round is actually played on.

Sixteen formats settle onto one leaderboard. Fifteen are scored automatically, including stroke play, Stableford, match play, four-ball, foursomes, scramble, skins and Nassau.

"Other" is a club's own format, scored by hand.

Stroke Play Stableford Modified Stableford Match Play Four-Ball Best Ball Foursomes
Alternate Shot Greensomes Chapman / Pinehurst Shamble Scramble Texas Scramble Skins
Nassau Other, by hand

MONEY

Worked out and written down, never moved

TourneyHQ calculates and records money. It never moves money.

Skins, side bets, prize splits and shared costs are arithmetic and a record of who owes whom. Paying happens between people, outside the app.

A pot is paid only when its amount can no longer change, which is why skins wait for the round to finish. A Nassau segment that is already decided is paid as it happens.

CASUAL ROUNDS

A quick game at the course, or a planned event

A casual round is set up in a minute on the first tee for a few friends and a friendly bet. Anything planned in advance is a tournament, which is free to start on Par.

	CASUAL ROUND	TOURNAMENT
For	2 to 8 players, decided on the day	A club, society or league event
Rounds	One	One or many, with cuts, flights and brackets
Who runs it	The player who set it up, for that round only	The organizer and staff, in the console
Money	A game between the players	Skins, side bets, prizes and shared costs
Afterwards	Expires after its window	Kept, except on Par, where it is removed on close

PLANS

The golf is never behind a paywall

Every format, the scoring, the boards and the money work on every plan. Plans differ in size, administration and how much is kept.

PLAN	WHO IT IS FOR	IN SHORT
Par	Trying it, or a small group	Free. Up to 10 players, one tournament at a time, one organizer. A tournament is removed when it is closed, after a prompt to download it first.
Birdie	Leagues and societies	Bigger fields, seasons across tournaments, honours boards.
Eagle	Clubs	No field cap and more staff seats.
Albatross	Associations and corporates	By conversation.

Prices and exact allowances are set on the live pricing page and can be adjusted by the platform owner.

UNDER THE HOOD

One app, every screen

For a technical reader: a single web application serves the console, the player app and the public board, and is packaged for phones and desktop.

Shipping safely

- Every change runs type checks, about 9,600 unit tests, about 1,500 database tests, a walk of every screen, and end-to-end tests on three phone and desktop sizes
- Production deploys only after all of that passes

Privacy

- Public boards show names and scores only
- Players' screens are kept out of search engines
- Data removal is described on the privacy page

Look and feel

- A club picks its colours for the console and the public board
- The player app keeps one scoreboard look
- Light and dark, both at sunlight contrast

This page is the high-level map. The detailed user guide, with step-by-step screens for organizers and players, comes next.
